KNOWN RUSSIANS ELEVEN TO BE KILLED.

SHOWN COMMUNISTS PLANS CONSULATE RAID.

TENSE. SITUATION STILL

It is now announced that no fewer than eleven Russians have been killed in Canton, a semi-official statement saying they were caught leading various "Red" parties engaged in storming police" stations and other Covernment buildings.

A Canton communique says that the raid on the Soviet Consulate has provided further proof that the Communists planned to disturb the peace of neighbouring countries. The Consul and staff are still detained, and the Canton Foreign Commissioner is personally seeing to their safety. A tense situation still prevails in Canton, where there are fears "that troops from the East and West Rivers may soon attack the "Ironsides." General Li Fuk-lum has taken his men back to Honam island, but he is expected to side with any force which may attempt to oust the present rulers of Canton. General Hseih Yo, in Canton, is said to have no idea of attempting to hold the city against invaders.

The biggest movement to drive out the "Ironsides," is expected to be made from the East River by General Chan Chai-tong, a supporter of Li Chai-sum.

RIDDLE OF GLOZEL

THE HONGKONG TELEGRAPH.

EXPERTS EXAMINE ALLEGED RELICS PREHISTORIC FIND.

DIVIDED VIEWS.

The international commission investigating the alleged prehistoric finds at Glozel has examined the objects which were discovered by Dr. Morlet and young Mr. Fradin during the past three years (says the Daily Chronicle special correspondent at Paris.) There are nearly 3,500 specimens.

First they inspected the finds in M. Fradin's "museum" at Glozel. Returning to Vichy they viewed Dr. Morlet's collection.

The commission's report will not be ready for about three weeks. " Articles unearthed by the commission" are:--One bone needle, three pelables, one stone engraved with the head of a reindeer, one Hidel in red clay, one bone pendant or button, one engraved brick, and one ring or schist.

No member for the commission has expressed any opinion regarding the genuineness " of these

All are maintaining a Trappist silence, but the battle of the bones and bricks goes on fiercely in the

Some newspapers maintain that the finds made by the commission really, amount to a complete victory for the Glozelites' theory that prehistoric man could read and write, and that civilisation dawned not on the Pamir Plateau but on the moors of Auvergne.

Ancient or Modern.

Discoveries by the commission really mean nothing of the sort. Four questions have yet to be answered-1, Is Farmer Fradin's field the site of a prehistoric cometery or temple. 2. Were the articles put there at a comparatively recent date? 3. Are they genuine or faked? 4, If genuine, to what age do they belong?

On these questions the commis- cans. sion has not yet even indicated its thoughts, nor will they be known until its report is published.

Firlds Reported Genuine.

It spite of the fact that the In- mainly vegetable and consists ternational Commission | charged | largely of rice. with a examination of the Glozel remain excessively sceptical.

Even if they are genuine, they are considered to be by no means revolutionary.

One French member of the Institute des Inscriptions suggested that a few of the objects were genuine, but others, in his opinion, were false.

Civilisation Born in the West,

The decision of the International Commission on the "Glozel discoveries, that the objects found authentic, and that the signs scratched on the tablets are a form of writing, revolutionises the whole science of pre-history, says a Reuter message.

It means that civilisation, which, for all practical purposes, may be identified with a knowledge of reading and writing, existed several thousand years before the date hitherto ascribed to the first alphabet by archæologists. ""

Professor Reinach conjectures that "it is possible that the inhabitants of Glozel used a system of writing current in pre-historic times, and which had its birth in Western Europe, Gradually found its way eastward, and served as a model for the Mediterranean peoples, being adopted finally with alterations by the Phœnicians. This theory would tend to show that civilisation originated not in the East, but in the West.

MODERN DIET FREED OF BLAME FOR CANCER.

WORLD-WIDE EXPERIENCE.

The adherence of the notion that cancer in the human race is due to the modern diet and that the disease would disappear if all of us were to return to primitive! methods of living commonly support their views by the citation of general impressions.

The answer to their claims comes in a series of articles published in various portions of the world relative to the incidence of cancer among primitive people.

For instance, Dr. M. J. A. Des-Ligneris reports the incidence of the disease among the people of South Africa. He , found 291 cases of tumours among 13,170 patients. Macygonr found 141 cases in 10,000 native patients. In Ceylon the rate a for cancer of the mouth is high.

Investigation in Java. In Java, Wieberdink found that cancer occurs one and a half times more frequently in women than in men and that the percentage of tumours among the people was about the same as is found in European hospitals. There were proportionately not somany cases of cancer of the stomach among the internal female organs as occurred among European people.

Many patients suffering with tumours die in tropical countries of pneumonia, malaria, dysentery or hookworm. These diseases carry them off at a premature age. Cancer is seldom noted in relation to the cause of death.

Frequent in Africa. A report from the gold coast of Africa indicates frequent appearance of 'malignant growths among the African natives, and E. B. Vedder found records of malignant tumours not infrequently among the Filipinos; indeed figure higher than that for Ameri-

HAVE YOU EVER thought of the different kinds of milk you have had in your pantry? There's "yesterday's". There's the milk which has "turned" and there's the milk which hasn't turned yet, but is turning: There's the pale blue milk which you find at the bottom of the jug with a fly in it, and there's the milk which leaves no stain on a glass. All of it milk, but not milky!

"Milkmaid" is always in one condition. It is milk at its creamiest; milk at its cleanest. It is pure, rich, uncontaminated milk and it keeps to the last drop.

"But now I am happy," he continued, "and I look to the future with the thought that I will enjoy the remainder of my days.

"Naturally, I cannot go in detail at present into the harrowing experience of my life in prison. That would take too long. I can only say this, from some experience, God help the man who ever finds himself in such a predicament as I was."

THE CENTENARY OF NAVARINO.

LAST. MONTH'S HISTORIC CELEBRATIONS.

The Navarino centenary celebrations, both in Greece and London, were attended by descendants of those who fought in the battle or in the Greek War of Independence. After Lord Burnham had opened a commemoration exhibition at the Greek Legation the Greek Minister proceeded to the library, where he decorated the flag of Admiral Codrington flown in H.M.S., Asia with the Greek War Cross of the First Class, by order of the President of the Greek Republic. Licutenant-General Sir Alfred Codrington (who had lent the flag), was unable to be present as he was at Navarino representing Great Britain, and his son, Colonel Codring. ton (great-grandson of the Admiral) thanked the President and the Minister for the kind thought. The medal would remain where Mr. Ramsay MacDonald-In it had been placed on the flag and

He said that Sir Alfred Codrington had Mr. Naylor asked whether it sailed into Navarino Bay in one of his Majesty's ships just as his grandfather had sailed into the bay 100 years ago, and thus had fulfilled the ambition of his life. The tables at this dinner were decorated with streamers and flowers of the colours of the two countries; and each guest was presented with a reprint from The Times of November 12, 1827, containing dispatches from Admiral Codrington describing the battle of Navarino.

From Codrington to Clean.

Some of the relics which were being exhibited at the Greek Legal tion until November 11 are full of interest. There are the uniform with the scars of service worn by Admiral Codrington during the battle; round shot fired, into the Asia; the telescope and sword Commander Bathurst; the sword of the Captain of the Turkish Hagship taken by Captain John Ta Ommaney, of H.M.S. Albion, and a 4 card-table made from the wood 1 of the Turkish flagship. Byron clothes or the uniform of a ward- relies include his sword and pistol, locks from his hair, and his seem stranger and unbecoming, dispatch box, a quaint affair like a large jewel box; many portraits of him, including the rare one with a helmet, were also shown. The portraits of Greek heroes are attractive; a set, of the famous Spartan family, Mavromichalis, most of whom fell during the struggle 1821-1829, in a "notable line of gallant-looking men. There are many portraits and battle pictures and a curious set of old transfer plates covering incidents in the War of Independence. WORLD THEATRE.

"THE LAST DAYS OF POMPEH" TO-DAY.

Johnnie Walker, has turned Lord Lytton's famous story,

The tremendous climax in this film where the city of Pompeli is destroyed, will remain in the memory for many a long day. Never have there been such aweinspiring scenes in a picture as are to be seen in this film with Vesuvius crupting and raining fire and lava over the city, great palaces being razed to the ground and the multitude fleeing in terror. Splendid as are the preceding scenes in the film, the last two reels are extremely thrilling. It is difficult to describe in mere words the magnificent drama in a story told by a young author at these concluding reels, and the brilliantly coloured "shots" of Vesuvius erupting, with the gentre scenes in the editorial office eral destruction of Pompai would form part of the general burlesque. alone make this picture a tremen'd-ous attraction. "The Last Days of Pompeii" is in no way a mere spectacle, for it has more story than any other picture of this character.

LEASES IN THE CONCESSIONS.

ment, was interpreted by some as meaning, that Britain was giving up her rights in the various concessions in China, or, at least, that the action was a preliminary step towards that end. Actually, however, the arrangement that has been come to is merely one between; the. Government and several lot-holders in the Concessions, whereby the former will no longer occupy the role of ground landlord, this being effected by a surrender of the remainder of such leases as have as yet, not expired.

To understand the position clearly, it should be borne in mind that Britain holds its various and preparation-a great Concessions in China on lease in perpetuity, and that she will contime as the Treaties conferring the rights have been either abroof the Concessions, the British leased property therein, for specified periods, to various individuals lord, has charged Crown rent to. the lessees. It is these leases which the Government mow intends to cancel-for that is in reality what the decision means--and the lot-holders will thus be left in possession of their property, without paying any ground rent, for so long as Britain holds the Concessions. At one time, the Government contemplated the outright sale of the leases to the lot-holders, from which a sum of £400,000 would have been secured, but this idea has now been abandoned in favour of a free assignment of the leases-presumably because the Government could not give any guarantee of tenure. The practical effect of the decision is to convert the properties from leasehold to freehold, but of course, only for such time as are maintained. It is, however, to be presumed that in the event of Britain surrendering her rights, some Trenty stipulation would be made regarding the future position of the lot-holders. As the period for which Britain leased many of those bots has anot yet expired, and as the lots were purchased on the understanding that the leases would run their full course, it would be obviously unreasonable to expect lot-holders to surrender their properties to. say, the Chinese authorities without compensation in the event, of] Britain surrendering her Concession rights in the interim.

In brief, what the British Government has decided to forego is its position as ground landlord, with the rights of collecting rent attaching thereto. To continue the "Government's right to ing. guarantee tenancy for specified years ahead, and, in view of, recent declarations of policy, this is precisely what the Government feels it ought not and cannot do. In the circumstances, the Government's decision appears quite reasonable, but, all the same, we do trust that if eventually the status of the Concessions is changed, the lot-holders will not be left entirely to their own resources.

Christmas Weather.

It looks as though the folk at Home are going to be favoured with a really "old-fashioned Christmas" in the matter of weather. But there are many of us Lwho now think of snow and frost (and the damp and fogs as well) with much misgiving after our spell of life in the warmer Far East. If we take last Sunday as an example, surely there is much cause for thankfulness in the fact that we here can spend a day in December out in the warm sunshine, with the thermometer just over the 70 mark. It is one thing to dwell upon the picturesque idea of snow and frost at Christmas but it is, we suggest, a much more tangible pleasure to enjoy the glorious winter weather wit which this Colony is favoured. And so we find some compensation for our separation' from the family circle of Home. During the few remaining days there will be all the usual shopping bustle, of the spirit which goes ' to make festival. And while we' out tinue so to hold them until such here shall have our thoughts with those at Home and shall be making our own preparations for the holiday, the thought comes that, gated or revised. DEAD SEA SALTS CONCESSION.

All claims must reach this office QUESTIONS IN THE COMMONS,

London, Dec. 19. In the House of Commons, the Undersecretary for the Colonies was asked whether, in view of the great value and extensive interests concerned in the Dead Sea concession, the Government would ment. take measures for forming an independent British company on the lines of a chartered company for working out this concession.

Mr. Ormsby Gore replied that in view of the terms of the Mandate for Palestine and the Covenant of the League of Nations it was not practicable to adopt the suggestion.

Asked whether there was any possibility of the Dead Sea salt being handed over to German interests, Mr. Ormsby Gore replied that in the negotiations an endeavour was being made to arrange that any concessionaire selling outside Palestine should not enter into an agreement with any one of the three big monopolies without the concurrence of the Government. But 'it' was very difficult to sell an article of that kind in the world's market without some form of agreement with existing organisations. Asked if the concessionaires were not supported almost entirely by British capital, Mr. Ormsby Gore said he understood they were supported by quite independent capital not in any way connected with any of the present potash A further question was put as

OLD BRANDY SWINDLE.

BOTTLES SMEARED AND SOOTED.

In a letter to The Daily Mail
Mr. Charles E. Stambois draws attention to what he describes as the vintage brandy "ramp" in certain dance clubs, restaurants and hotels throughout the country.

He declares that to expose the way in which brandy five or sizy years old is sold as 1865 or some other old vintage, in carefully sooted bottles with impressive labels, would be to do a real service to genuine shippers of authentic Cognacs and to the firms who not only distil the spirit but own vineyards in the Cognac district of Charante.

"The towns of Cognac and Jarnac," writes Mr. Stambois, "have hundreds of agents who register their names at the post offices as Cognac merchants and shippers, but the only busines, that they do is to catch British buyers of brandy as soon as they arrive in the district."

99 Per Cent. Faked. Mr. Stambois told a Daily Mail reporter that nearly 99 per cent. of the so-called vintage brandy that is sold from bottles in restaurants, hotel and dance clubs in England is faked. He con-

The way to know a genuine bottle of vintage brandy is to look for the labels of the growers and the bottles, and if brandy is drunk in a hotel or a restaurant the customer should insist on seeing the bottle opened.
